SPIKE THOSE RAILS

Ma Perkins ran the best eating place in Newton City. True, there were other establishments that served you a variety of items known as food, but Ma Perkins was the only cook who could give you fresh eggs. Her husband guarded the valuable chickens that had been brought from the East.

At one table was a very big man seated on a chair that only could accommodate half of him. He must have weighed at least two hundred and sixty pounds. Yet he was all muscle and at the moment was enjoying eating half a dozen fried eggs. He was so busy with his food that he didn't notice the thin young girl who had entered the place. She looked around and finally spotted the large man. Slowly she walked over to him and stopped at his table.

"I'll give you a thousand dollars in gold to leave town before noon," she said calmly. "My dad is going to finish his section of the railroad. There is nothing the Central can do to stop him. All you can do is to cause trouble and perhaps bloodshed. Maybe you frighten others, but I'm not scared."

The man at the table slowly shifted his eyes from his plate to the girl. She was hardly more than nineteen and rather pretty. Her corn colored hair was tied in a knot at the back of her head and her eyes were blue. The man removed a big napkin he had tied around his neck. The young girl took one look at the U.S. Marshall badge he was wearing and blushed.

"Oh," she apologized, "Can you please forgive me? I thought you were George Judd."

"I happen to be Harry Hewitt, U.S. Marshal for the district," he explained. "I am out here to see that law and order are kept. We have enough trouble on our hands with rustlers, gun fighters, Indians off the reservation, and angry wagon men. Now we have two railroads about to fight each other. You just come with me to the table at the other side. Somebody you want to meet."

The girl followed the big man and both stopped at a table where a young thin man was seated comfortably.

"Well," he greeted, "A good sight for sore eyes. How are you Harry? How's the wife and the three kids? And just who is this beautiful girl you brought over?"

"She's the daughter of Dan Parker. He's in charge of the construction crew of the Pacific group. Seems she wants to give you money to leave town and not start trouble. She must be a bit mixed up with a lot of things. Nobody starts trouble here, and nobody pays anybody money to avoid trouble. Furthermore, she has the wrong idea about you and your work."

The famous trouble shooter for the Central railroad arose from his chair. The three started walking out of Ma Perkins place after all bills were paid.

"You have a first name?" asked George Judd. "Edith," was the reply.

"Then let me make this clear," continued George Judd. "We won't interfere with what your father is doing, and he won't interfere with us. I guess you have heard all kinds of stories about me, but get this one fact straight and the Marshall here will tell you it is true: My job is also to keep law. The United States Government is paying a bonus to get the tracks through. I hold a special federal authorization to keep law and order. So just don't worry your pretty head about a thing."

Outside the horses were hitched to the rail. A man was riding at full speed down the one street of the town. He stopped in front of the trouble shooter and dismounted.

"You better come at once. Looks like trouble. John Boxill and his boys are hinting they can stop raids by the Indians for a fee. The old game they tried in Kansas. Dan Parker is over with Mike Delantey."

The rider remounted his horse. The Marshal, George Judd, and Edith Parker soon were on their mounts. Three quarters of an hour of hard riding brought them to where the iron rails were being laid. They dismounted. Angry voices were being heard. Mike Delantey went over to George Judd.

"They want me to put them on the payroll. Tried the same with Dan Parker. Guess they are tired of being buffalo hunters. I told them to move on. Said they would remain right here."

John Boxill was a bearded man who had built up an evil reputation in the West. George Judd walked right up to him.

"You are on private property. Now get off and stay off."

John Boxill's right hand dropped closer to the butt of his .44. The movement was not lost upon the keen eyes of George Judd.

"You might be able to get your six shooter half out of the holster," he warned, "But you would never live to fire it. So take my advice. Relax and get out of here."

The bearded man grinned and signaled to his men to leave. He had no desire to try anything with the man who had the reputation of being the fastest on the draw in the West. When they had gone, Dan Parker walked over to George Judd.

"Took a lot of nerve to outface him. I guess the stories I have heard about you must be all wrong."

"Depends upon what you have heard," was the reply. "But you can watch how I am going to handle him. Mike, build me a signaling fire."

For the next half hour, George Judd was busy sending up smoke messages. Then from a high mountain peak in the distance came back other smoke signals.

"Chief Red Wing knows what to expect and what to do," he informed those watching him in awe. "In this West, if you want trouble, you can have it."

Onward went the rails. The graders and their men were ahead of the rail men. The work of the grading gang was done largely by plows, scrapers and teams, supplemented by shovel and wheelbarrow. Long plank walks were built for runways and perspiring men wheeled great loads of dirt and dumped them. When rocks were encountered, hand drills and black powder were used to dislodge the stones. Then came the track layers. They rolled out of bed early in the morning, ate a hearty breakfast and started working. Their task was the placing of ties on the grade, carrying the rails, and spiking them down. They normally laid a mile of track a day when the weather was good. Edith saw a lot of George Judd. She noticed a worried expression on his face.

"What's bothering you, George?" she asked.

"John Boxill and his men will strike soon," he explained. "We are ready. I wish your father would realize the danger. He feels everything is fine."

Two nights later it happened. Edith was in her tent when she heard the shooting. John Boxill and his raiders had struck. They had set fire to a vast store of supplies which were now burning, and then they had vanished. In the morning George Judd paid the burnt camp a visit.

"I tried my best to warn you," he said. "However, Chief Red Wing did his best to try to prevent the raid. They laid a trap and caught the men as they returned. They will all be turned over to Federal authorities. Marshal Harry Hewitt and his men have gone out to the Indian camp to get their prisoners. If I can help you in any way, let me know."

A man walked up to George Judd and handed him a message which he carefully read. There was a slight smile on his face. He went over to Edith.

"I have to return to St. Louis at the end of the week. Will you go with me as my wife?"

She was in his arms and her lips met his. That was her way of answering in the affirmative. When she spoke she asked a simple question.

"Small or big wedding?"

"The biggest one the West has ever seen," replied her husband-to-be. "We will have all the men of our railroad together, and we do have to invite Chief Red Wing. We happen to be blood brothers. The best man will be the Marshall. He really brought us together."

Edith was quick to realize he had used a peculiar expression.

"Our railroad?" she questioned.

"The Pacific and the Central have just merged. So it is one big railroad. We build up to the pass and then single track across. Yes, darling, our railroad. We build it and protect it."

And above the din of the noise could be heard the shout of the railmen:

"Spike Those Rails! Spike Those Rails."

ROCKY WITH BLACK JACK

Howdy, "Podners":

Riding bog is the toughest, dirtiest, most dangerous chore on the range. You see, when the rivers get swollen and spill over, they turn the bottoms of the ranges into beds of mud, which sometimes get to be nigh waist deep. When a lot of critters (cattle) get bogged down in the mud, the bog-riders (cowboys) have to haul 'em out to save their lives ... which is easier said than done. IT TAKES A POWERFUL LOT OF TEAM WORK between a cowboy and his horse, but I reckon TEAM WORK always was known to work wonders.

First off, only horses with plenty of "savvy" and experience are used. A raw bronc might get himself bogged down and that would be a fix. When a bog-rider signals a critter that's bogged down (stuck in the mud) he builds himself a big loop with his rope and eases his horse as close as possible. Then he ropes the critter by the horns and gives his rope a twist or two around his saddle horn, (this twist is called a dally) so he can ease up in case the critter is trying to get its feet under it and draw itself up while the horse is slowly hauling it out.

Most of the critters that are bogged down'll fight the bog-rider and that's where the bog-rider depends on his horse and -- TEAM WORK. Your horse has to "savvy" his rope signals right well, too. Most horses are taught to give a little slack when you give your rope a yank or two and to pull when you "snake" the slack back at him.

It's important to remember that saving all those lives on the bog line can be put right down to -- TEAM WORK. So let's all of us Pards get the hang of working together, whether it's at home or while riding the bog line, 'cause team work is what makes a "PODNER" out of a fellow.

Your pals, Allan "Rocky" Lane and Black Jack U

WHAT'S AN ALARM CLOCK GOT TO DO WITH THE SOUND OF MARCHING?

THEY SAY "TIME MARCHES ON!"

HOW DARE YUH CALL ME DUMB AFTER TALKING LIKE THAT?

I'M SO TIRED, I DON'T KNOW WHAT I'M SAYING!

BUT IF YUH LIE IN BED SO LONG, HOW COME YO'RE TIRED?

I SNORE SO MUCH I WAKE MYSELF UP!

I KNOW HOW YUH COULD REMEDY THAT!

YEAH? HOW?

BY SLEEPING IN ANOTHER ROOM!

YO'RE SO DUMB, I SHOULDN'T HAVE EVEN WASTED TIME EXPLAINING TO YUH WHAT HAPPENED TO YORE CAT---

---I SHOULD HAVE JUST TOSSED YUH A DOLLAR AND CALLED IT EVEN! AND DON'T TRY TO TELL ME YUH EXPECTED MORE!

NO! I DIDN'T EXPECT MORE---

---ESPECIALLY SINCE IT WASN'T MUH CAT! SO LONG!

BLACK JACK'S

HITCHING POST

FOLKS HAVE ALWAYS BEEN EAGER TO FEED HORSES A FEW LUMPS OF SUGAR, BUT SALT WOULD BE A HEAP BETTER, AND MORE TO A BRONG'S LIKING.

BRONCS RUNNING THE RANGE WILL TRAVEL MANY MILES TO A SALT LICK FOR A SALT FEED DURING A HOT SPELL.

THEY SEEM TO KNOW THAT A PINCH OF SALT TAKEN DURING A HOT SPELL WILL MAKE YOU ABLE TO STAND THE HEAT A HEAP BETTER.

OF COURSE, WHEN A BRONG IS BUCKING STORMS AND CUTTING THROUGH HEAVY SNOWDRIFTS, HE NEEDS GOOD, SUBSTANTIAL GRUB.

...AND HIS MASTER SEES TO IT THAT HE GETS HIS SHARE OF GRAIN OR OATS, OUT ON THE RANGE, A BRONG COMES FIRST! NO COWBOY WOULD THINK OF TAKING CARE OF HIS OWN WANTS BEFORE TAKING CARE OF HIS BRONG'S. A WADDY AND HIS BRONG ARE PARFS.

BUT IN THE SUMMER, WHEN THE WINTER REMUDA IS TURNED OUT ON THE RANGE, THE BRONCS HAVE ALL THE FOOD THEY NEED GROWING ALL AROUND THEM. GRASS HAS ALL THE NOURISHMENT THEY NEED TO GET ALONG ON, AND NO ONE EVER HEARD OF A BRONG ON THE RANGE STUFFING HIMSELF UNTIL HE COULDN'T MOVE.

HORSES GRAZE IN SHORT SPELLS. THEY PLUMB BELIEVE IN KEEPING FIT--WHICH IS A MIGHTY GOOD TIP TO PASS ALONG. IT'S JUST GOOD, PLAIN HOSS-SENSE.
